ABOUT	7

A woman in a grey tank top is sitting on the ground, covering her face with her hands while talking on a black mobile phone. The background is a blurred outdoor scene, possibly a car accident site, with a person in a white shirt and dark pants visible in the distance. The overall tone is somber and distressed.

INTRODUCTION

After being injured in a car accident, you may be seeking to receive justice and compensation for your pain and suffering. After all, you shouldn't have to suffer for the negligence of another person. There are certain steps you can and should take to ensure that you are able to win your car accident injury case. Each step works to provide evidence of how your accident impacted your life.

Here are the steps you need to take to win your car accident injury case and make sure justice is served:

RECEIVE MEDICAL ATTENTION AS SOON AS POSSIBLE

After an auto accident, the first thing you should do is see to your health first and foremost. Avoid making the mistake of “toughing it out” or thinking you are just fine after an auto accident.

Even if you are convinced there is nothing wrong, confirm that belief with the help of a medical professional. Some injuries after an auto accident may not be immediately obvious, such as brain injuries or internal bleeding. Pains, numbness and dizziness may not be immediately apparent in the aftermath of an accident due to adrenaline, and waiting too long may be fatal.

Besides taking care of your physical health, receiving medical verification of your injuries is essential to winning your personal injury case. You’ll want to have evidence of what injuries you received, how they were treated, and how they affected you both physically and financially.

Seeking medical assistance for injuries gives you the documented evidence your injury attorney can use to craft a winning injury case.

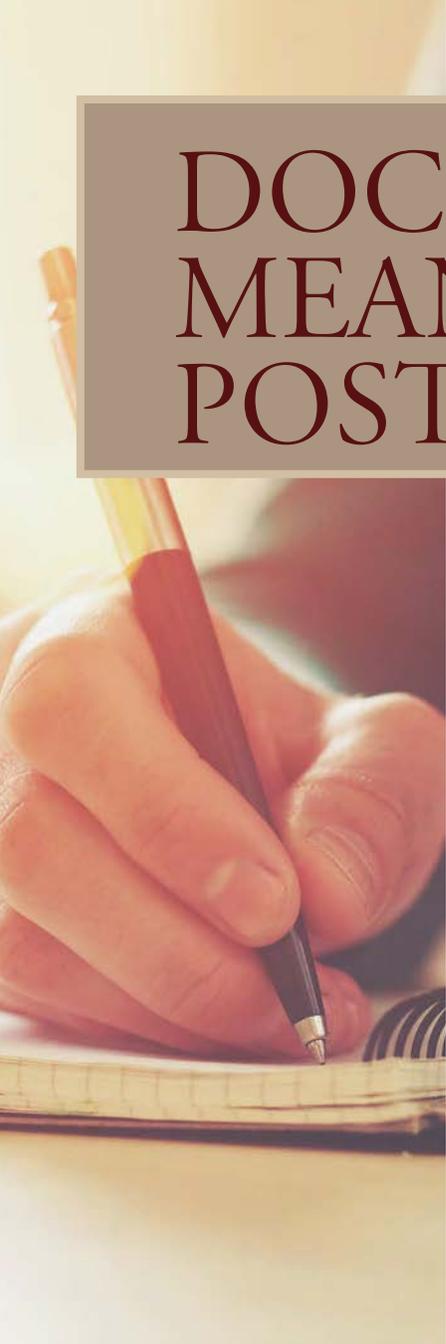

OBTAINING ADDITIONAL ACCIDENT EVIDENCE

In addition to medical documentation, also take steps to preserve and record additional accident evidence. Take pictures and gather information of the scene of the accident, including:

- Your immediate physical injuries including any cuts, scrapes, or bruises
- Vehicle damages caused by the accident
- Names and contact information of witnesses
- A copy of the police report
- And any other information you think may show the fault of the other party

DOCUMENT EVERY MEANINGFUL EVENT POST-ACCIDENT

Also, be sure to document everything that happened to you after an accident. It is important to keep a record of any debilitation that was caused by your accident. You may keep track of:

- Hospital visits
- Lost wages and work missed
- Overall decrease in quality of life due to your inability to perform your normal tasks
- Other things that cause you physical, financial, or emotional harm

Why is this information so important? Simply put, it helps your eventual attorney determine the extent of the damages you suffered. Providing this information to an injury attorney saves valuable time, freeing your injury attorney to spend time on crafting a compelling strategy that leads to a winning case. Most importantly, this information helps ensure you receive the most compensation possible for your injuries.

Provide all of this information to your lawyer. Once these steps have been taken, your Texas injury attorney can take care of the rest to determine the scope of your case and ensure you file the lawsuit in a timely manner.

CHOOSING THE RIGHT TEXAS INJURY ATTORNEY

All of the previous steps are important for you to take, but without the right injury attorney, you may not receive the compensation you deserve. That is why you must make sure you have chosen the right Texas injury lawyer for the job. A trusted injury attorney assesses every piece of evidence and gets the witnesses necessary to obtain deserved compensation for their injured clients.

- Additionally, choose a Texas injury attorney who:
- Has the Experience You Need to Win
- Has the Focus and Desire to Give Your Case the Personalized Attention It Deserves
- Communicates with You and Can Remain Objective While Giving You the Advice You Need to Win
- Is Enthusiastic, Personable and Has Earned a Quality Reputation

Take criteria such as this into account when you sit down and discuss the facts of your case with any prospective injury attorney.
